

Nepal is one such nation where festivals are celebrated throughout the year. A look at the Nepalese calendar can surprise one to find at least a major national festival celebrated a month. Any visit to Nepal is certain to coincide with at least one of the country's spectacular festival. Festivals are celebrated in various forms but the most impressive ones are the {tooltip} Chariot Processions

Chariot Festival: Kathmandu Nepal{end-tooltip}. These processions are taken out in all the cities of the valley at different times but all for the sake of rainfall.

Majority of Nepalese even in this age greatly depend on farming for their daily food. But farming is still so much in its primitive stage that they still have to knock the heaven's door urging the Almighty to shower mercy on them with rains. The only way to free them from this worry and stay relaxed is the chariot festivals during which they pray to the rain god for the better crops.
